For those interested in modern devices, your Herald will be phasing in a Cathode Ray Tube editing and tape production unit in the next few months.

Almost every one has at least one Television set in the house.

Imagine, if you will a similar scanning device atop a transistorized, electronic keyboard with an attachment that both punches tape and reads it.

A number of dailies have put in these devices for proofreading copy. We propose to write deadline stories, proofread and edit in one operation, correct and send the copy into the typesetting computer, one person doing what three once did.

It is far more than a gadget. We can link this video-keyboard device by long distance telephone to another computer used for accounting procedures . We should be able to dial the computer, ask for information from this keyboard and receive visual answers in return, which, if we choose, can be set through the taping device into the typesetter. A word would not have to be spoken. Or we can put information into the remote computer for recall later.

Any number of applications can be applied.

NOW - NOW - NOW

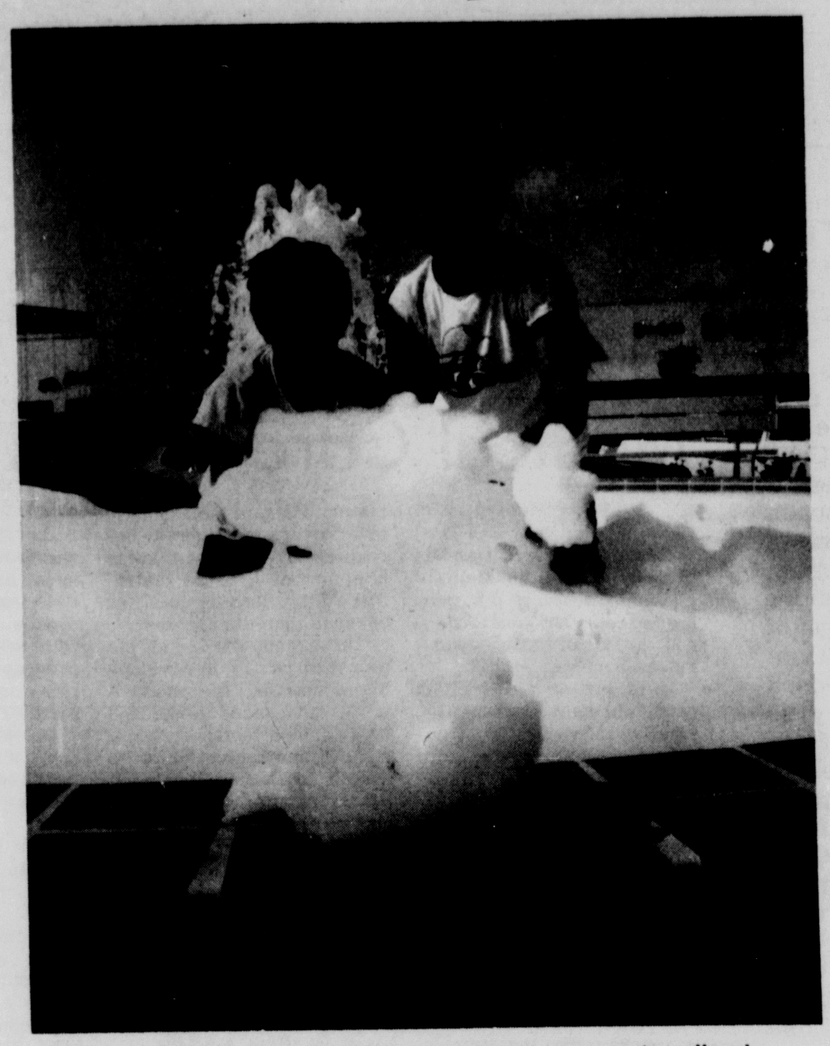
Through recent years, we've noted the developments of technology in this and numerous industries. This CRT unit is one step away from the ultimate in modern newspapers which will be information in paragraph, page or special interest transmitted to your home TV set or visual scanner.

It's coming. And we're trying to stay ahead of the time when reading a newspaper will be turning a dial instead of page. At your option , that is.

Band Boosters Meet Tonight

The Band Booster Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, July 15 at the Band Hall. New officers will be installed. All interested parents and friends of the band are encouraged to attend.

Milam Eyes Anthrax In Falls



SUMMER MADNESS affected pranksters who dumped soap into the mall pool. Clouds of soapsuds blew around town as the bubbling fountain agitated the soap and made cleaning difficult. These youngsters show depth of the suds.

Milam County cattle producers are eying with concern an outbreak of deadly anthrax in neighboring Falls County, but so far the cases seem confined to a quarantined area in the county.

County Agent Bill McCutchen said he has received several calls from producers concerned about the outbreak, which has claimed at least 70 animals including cattle horses and mules and an $8,000 registered bull.

The agent recommended that producers keep a close check on their livestock and have any deaths checked out by a licensed veterinarian. He said he hopes the outbreak was detected early enough to prevent its spread.

Blame for the outbreak has been placed by animal health officials on the current drought, which has caused the animals to graze the grass into the ground.

State officials explained that the anthrax bacteria can live in the ground for many years under all conditions, and can be picked up by animals grazing close to the ground.

The quarantine covers one-fourth of Falls County. Roadblocks have set up by the United States Department of Agriculture in the southeast portion of the county.

Adding to the concern over the anthrax verifications is the sale of about 1,300 head of cattle last Monday at the Falls County Livestock Auction to cattlemen throughout the state and some from out of state.

Falls County Agent Gilbert Wood said this is the first time he can remember anthrax Falls County "in the 17 years I've been here."

McCutchen noted that buzzards and coyotes eating the dead animals can be carriers and spreaders of the disease.

An animal with anthrax may show abnormal bloating, or presence of gas or air bubbles under the skin. It affects the animal quickly.

The quarantine, Wood said, will remain in effect for at least another two weeks.

With weather conditions similar in Falls County to all of Central Texas, anthrax could break out elsewhere, officials said.

The disease is not to be taken lightly, McCutchen said. adding that producers stand the chance of losing entire herds to the disease, which spreads rapidly.

Lumpkin Named To City Council; Joint Meet Set

Only other action at the meeting was to change the date for the council's next meeting from July 16 to July 25, when the council meeting will adjourn to meet for a public hearing with the Community Development Agency.

The July 25 meeting will start at 5:30 p.m. at City Hall, then adjourn to Methodist Fellowship Hall for the joint meeting.

High Voltage Power Line Sets Grass Fire

Some 69,000 volts surged through a house under a power line Thursday about 11:45 a.m. and sparks from the incident set grass afire, with volunteer firemen extinguishing the blazes.

The house was being moved by R. O. Currey Housemovers and became caught under the power line, property of the Brazos Power Authority. The accident threatened to shut off power to the Belton area for a time.

The driver of the truck moving the house jumped free of the truck safely.

Farm Road 2269, off Highway 190, where the incident took place, was closed for about 30 minutes before the house could be moved.

Volunteers were also called out at 2:30 p.m. Thursday when lightning set a grass fire at Belmena.

Commissioners OK Election Judges

Milam County Commissioners meeting in regular session Thursday morning approved election judges and alternates for the general election in November and tabled until next month setting the tax rate for the county.

Commissioners also discussed collection of delinquent taxes and inspection of rural septic tanks by the county health department. Also coming in for discussion was tuberculin tests for health certificates for food handlers.

Delinquent taxes are due on property in Thorndale and the county tax collector will contact city and school tax offices about a joint effort to collect the taxes, using one attorney.

County Judge O. B. Harden said inspection of septic tanks by the county health inspector would also help put unrendered property on the county tax rolls.

From there the discussion centered on the fact that a tuberculin test is not required by state law for food handlers in cafes. It was pointed out that employees in local nursing homes and hospitals are tested, along with employees of one restaurant in Rockdale. Harden said he didn't know if the county could pass an ordinance requiring the TB test for county food handlers.

Style Home Mfg. Co. manager Keith Raine appeared before commissioners to render the furniture plant's tax valuation.

St. Edward Hospital Receives Accreditation

St. Edward Hospital has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH) according to Sister M. Jeanette, hospital administrator.

This accreditation, which cove from May, 1974 to May, 1976, is the result of an on-site survey made by field representatives of the Joint Commission's Hospital Accreditation Program. Accreditation indicates that this facility has chosen to operate according to standards set by JCAH and that the facility has, in the main, met these standards.

The standards, published as the Accreditation Manual for Hospitals, set forth optimal achievable goals of excellence against which a facility can measure itself and be measured by the Joint Commission's survey.

St. Edward Hospital is one of approximately 4,900 general hospitals throughout the U.S. that have earned this recognition. There are approximately 6,600 general hospitals in the U.S.

The Joint Commission's accreditation surveys are voluntary. It is not legally necessary for a hospital to be accredited, but health care facilities have sought accreditation because it represents a benchmark of quality that is higher than governmental licensure alone.

The chief aim of the Hospital Accreditation Program, one of four such programs under the JCAH umbrella, is to help hospitals in their pursuit of excellence and thereby provide a higher quality of care to patients. The program also seeks to recognize, and to identify for the public, those facilities which meet its standards.

It is a disappointment, but no surprise the Texas Legislature, sitting as the 1974 Constitutional Convention, turned down the first proposed state constitution, which includes some separate submissions.

The legislator - constitutionalists are bargaining to take out, put in or modify whatever is yet inconclusive for two-thirds approval (121 voted). The heat is on from home, from special groups to try to turn something so potentially permanent another way.

Atmosphere, one report says, was more like "a political gathering" than a conclave to write the first new Texas Constitution in almost 100 years.

The inherent weakness is that the Texas Senate and House chose to sit as a constitutional convention. Leaders of both bodies knew this, and as one said " it was the best we could do."

So the atmosphere had to be political.

Convention Chairman Price Daniel, Jr., believes the submissions are the issue, not the substance of the proposal itself.

He believes "deep down inside, 150 or 160 of these fellows would vote for the basic document."

Assuming this is true, it is likely the Submission and Transmission Committee, which began meetings after the 86-91 turndown, will try to modify the submissions hangup and return the basic document for approval, then the modified submissions.

If the necessary two-thirds is first won for the basic document, debate could be taken to the Convention floor to settle differences on the ancillary submissions toward total two-thirds approval.

Writing constitutions is not a thing which the ablest of men readily agree on. The first Constitutional Convention had the Articles of Confederation to draw upon and debate raged among a much smaller group of men, and likely by the man, more erudite than the average of the 1974 Texas Convention.

This document proposes a re - evaluation every 20 years and elements of its language proposes "self - destruct" orders for certain state agencies. This in itself might assuage this Convention that another century of finality is not exactly what they are approving.

And this brings out what pressures are being applied for further alteration. These would be special interests whose concerns are short-term suggesting economic interests whose legal foundation may be somewhere in the verbosity of the old document.

We think this Convention is trying to improve, not "tamper" with the legal foundation of Texas. Unfortunately, they are in the position of dealing with the essence of state government their constituents too little understand. Public schools in Texas have harrangued about the heros of the Alamo and 19th century traditions to the point that metro reality is sometime considered beyond state government, which now is controlled by metro legislators.

But a second, a third, a fourth, a fifth vote or more will break down politics enough to produce a document and submissions which two-thirds can endorse and public vote can approve.

Medical Care Sparks Global War

By Peter Mosley

LONDON

Reuter -- World war has broken out in the field of medical care and few people except the doctors -- and not all of those -- know much about it.

It is pitting rich against poor, old against young, the idealist against the pragmatist and the laboratory researcher against the barefoot doctor.

At stake worldwide -- and that means everybody from the two-car middle executive to the African or Asian villager -- is the future health of himself and his family.

At the heart of this global conflict lies a concept expressed, rather mundanely, in the term "health care delivery." It is represented by a growing band of pioneers known as "health care teams."

Minus the jargon, it amounts to a concerted effort both in the affluent and the under-privileged societies -- but especially in the latter -- to correct the injustices at present inherent in the medical world which grossly discriminate against the big city slum dweller and the rural peasant alike.

"Health for the masses" could be the rallying cry for this medical revolution.

More and More medical men are feeling the change.

The benevolent family doctor, comfortably established in a decent suburt, is becoming as much an anachronism as the huge, super-equipped, super-costly prestige hospital that can be found in too many newly emergent countries.

Often it lies only a stone's throw from the shanty towns whose citizens need basic hygiene and hourishment far more than sophisticated medical treatment.

Much further distant are the unreachables, the villagers whose plight, in terms of infant mortality, malnutrition and general disease, is even more pressing.

Somewhere along the line, it seems, medicine got its priorities all wrong.

Howhere recently has this been underlined as strongly as at last month's annual clinical congress in Kingston, Jamaica, of that rather staid, August body of doctors known as the British Medical Association (BMA). Every couple of years or so, the doctors take themselves abroad for this congress, many of them bringing wives along and combining business with pleasure.

Two years ago it was Cyprus. Before that, Malta.

This, year, shivering shirtsleeved in the air-conditioned hotel conference room while their wives basked outside in the balmy Jamaican springtime. The British doctors were assailed from the podium by a barrage of facts, figures and philosophy relating to health care and malnutrition.

The keynote was set right at the start by David Coore, Jamaica's finance minister and deputy prime minister. He told them bluntly that doctors today had to recognize that health care was a commodity, to be distributed by lesser qualified persons than themselves.

Throughout the world, but particularly in developing countries, the medical profession faced a demand for "more self-sacrifice, service and dedication to the people of their countries." All the people.

There were not enough doctors and perhaps there never would be. But medical care was also badly distributed and this could and must be rectified, hopefully with the co-operation of the profession itself.

"It is not easy to ask the medical profession to step out of tradition, but it is essential that it be done," he said.

By "the profession" he was obviously appealing to such organizations as the BMA and the Medical Association of Jamaica (MAJ) with whom it shared this congress. Their immediate response was polite but hardly rapturous.

Dr. Keith Stanley, president of the MAJ, half-jokingly accused the minister of having, in cricketing terms , bowled them a wide. "When it comes back from the slips it may not have the same message on it," he added.

If Jamaica can be regarded as a microcosm of the developing world -- and in terms of health care needs, it probably can -- then a hard struggle could lie ahead between government and doctors, at least the older, more established doctors who dominate the MAJ.

In an interview later, Coore made clear that if it came to a showdown, with the doctors refusing to abandon tradition and join in Jamaica's plans for an ambitious mass-health scheme, then the government would have to take action anyway.

Some people believed that gold was begotten by the sun and that the heat of underground veins wholly burned everything they came into contact with, turning those substances into gold.

LETTERS

Dear Frank:

I fin that I must make a rebuttal to another of your editorials following my letter to you of July 1. You somewhat missed the point, the point being that if there are great numbers in Cameron interested in tennis, and if it is a sport that can be enjoyed and useful to people in their 60s, adults who will play 25 to 50 years as you indicate, then surely these people would be interested in organizing themselves to provide these facilities. You head your latest editorial - For Those Unable . . and indicate, with a quick change of pace, that it is primarily for the young through college age and that they don't have the finances. You say "Cities do -- Schools do." Surely you know where these finances come from -- the taxpayer who sees his taxes increased continually to support increased budgets. I would like to see the schools use more of their budgeted finances to educate our young people in science and math and simple reading skills and not so much for entertainment and sports. Then a group of adults and young people, with some energy nd initiative and personal backing, should be able to provide the needed tennis courts.

Unfortunately, simply owning horses doesn't automatically make one affluent enough to build his own tennis court if he wanted to, or a rodeo arena, for that matter, but the Western way of life, practiced by the "agriculturally oriented" people can't be all bad if it produces people with enough self-reliance, energy and interest to provide for their own needs.

You propose "that more tennis facilities be built to meet a major recreation need in Cameron". I say why not organize, work hard, contact individuals, interest groups in assisting, and build our own, if needed.

Sincerely,
Lyle McDermott

Reuters Services KLRN-TV

A Texas public television station is taking on the services of Reuters News Agency, used by The Cameron Herald for three years.

The world wide services of over 1000 full-and part-time correspondents will be available to the KLRN - TV news department when the station begins drawing on the resources of the prestigious Reuters news agency in mid Reuters News Agency in mid July.

According to Larry Miller, news director for the San Antonio and Austin public television station, the service will also be used by KUT-FM (90.7mHz), Austin's public radion station.

"Naturally, we're quite excited about adding Reuters," says Miller. "It's reputation is known worldwide. It is respected as a prime news source by print and boadcast journalists alike. We believe the addition of Reuters to our newsroom -- along with our United Press International and National Weather Service Wires -- will provide KLRN/KUT News with considerably more news sources than are available to most broadcasting stations."

Reuters has correspondents in over 200 countries and is the only one of the three major wire services with bureaus in Peking and Cuba. The agency also maintains the world's largest business news operation.

TEA Reorganization Goes To Test, First Since '49

Plans for a new Texas Education Agency organizational structure will be presented to the State Board of Education (July 13) in Austin.

This major change signals the first top-to-bottom restructuring of the Texas Education Agency since it was formed under the Gilmer-Aikin Laws of 1949.

Built on a framework of policies adopted earlier by the Board, the plan will be presented by Dr. Marlin L. Brockette, new Texas commissioner of education.

Under the proposed arrangement, the scope of the commissioner's office would be reduced and the state department of education re-organized into two basic operating units, each charged with key functions specified in Board policies, Brockette said.

All most references to the "agency" focus on its state department of education element, the total structure also includes the State Board of Education and the commissioner of education.

The proposed pattern would place all policy forming units and services in the commissioner's office. Dr. Brockette would also retain the traditional role in the investment of the Permanent School Fund and the processing of legal appeals long held by Dr. J. W. Edgar, former commissioners who retired on June 30.

Remaining state epartment of education functions will be divided into two major elements, each headed by a deputy commissioner.

The first of these two major units will be directed by a deputy commissioner for educational programs and personnel development. It will include planning and evaluation, general education, occupational education and technology, special education, programs for special population, and professional development and instructional services.

Farmers Prefer To Lease Land

Buying more land is not always the best investment a farmer can make, according to an agricultural economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Instead, renting or leasing additional acres may be the answer to expanding production," says Dr. Wayne Hayenga.

Texas farm land prices increased about 9.5 per cent a year from 1966 to 1972. Thus, many investors besides farmers have been attracted to land as a hedge against inflation.

"The inflation hedge is not the only factor for farmers to consider," notes Hayenga. "The farmer is usually interested in controlling more land to increase the size of his business and to generate more income. Higher grain prices and easy credit have induced farmers to buy more land."

Since competition for land has bid up prices well above the land's ability to show agricultural profit, a farmer may be better off to rent the land from a non-farmer investor. This way, he can still use his scarce capital for other inputs which may improve the current rate of return.

"If a farmer is in a strong capital situation with an ample cash flow, land ownership can be highly desirable," notes the Texas A&M University System specialist. "However, younger or less-established farmers should be very thorough and realistic with their planning before deciding to make a land purchase.

"Agricultural census family farm incomes than part owner farmers," Hayenga points out. "This seems to indicate that renting land for expansion is a good economic alternative, allowing larger farm businesses and more efficient production."

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

The battle against tuberculosis is one of the most successful being waged by State Health Department authorities -- who in 1973 saw the number of new cases drop to its lowest point.

Statistics from the State Health Department's Tuberculosis Control Program reveal that only 2,224 new active cases were reported in 1973 -- a case rate of just 19 per 100,000 population. This compares to the high mark in 1968 of 3,216 new active cases -- a case rate of 29.3 per 100,000 population. Last year's figures, as compared to 1968, represent a 31.8 per cent reduction in newly reported active cases and a 35.2 per cent reduction in the new active rate case.

Statistics don't tell the full story about tuberculosis or any other disease for that matter. How can you accurately chronicle the pain, the suffering, the stigma accompanying a disease which did not occur?

The Bureau of Tuberculosis Services attributes the success of its TB Control Program to the active campaign that ensures: treatment and other essential services for the known cases; examinations of persons suspected of having tuberculosis; and, prevention of disease in persons at high risk.

Services are provided through local health department outpatient clinics and in 10 State Health Department Regions, three State Chest Hospitals at Tyler, San Antonio and Harlingen and contracts with other medical facilities for other support services.

The Tuberculosis Control Program as we know it today was placed under the State Health Department in 1965 by the 59th State Legislature.

A significant change has been seen in tuberculosis case finding, treatment and prevention.

One aspect of the program is centered in the schools of Texas with close cooperation of school officials, nurses, local health departments, health officers and voluntary organizations. All school personnel must have an annual tuberculosis examination. In addition, an average of a half-million first and seventh grade students have been tested annually since 1966. The result has been a sharp decrease in the incidence of TB in children through 14 years of age.

New drugs and new treatment procedures have greatly shortened the length of time necessary to cure a new tuberculosis patient.

Tuberculosis, in fact, has been tamed. But, according to State Health Department authorities, it hasn't been eliminated and probably will not be eliminated anytime in the near future.

What can you expect if you get TB?

There are some reassuring facts. First, very few TB patients die of the disease. In fact, tuberculosis no longer means that the victim must spend endless years, languishing in a hospital. In many cases, a tuberculosis patient today will spend about two or three months in a hospital -- either one of the State Chest Hospitals or in a public or private hospital closer to home.

Medical treatment begins as soon as the disease has been accurately diagnosed. Usual treatment consists of two or more medicines, taken orally several times a day. In many cases, the spread of the disease can be stopped in a matter of a few days and the patient is no longer infectious.

Once it is certain that the disease has been checked, the patient can be released from the hospital. And, in just a few weeks, the patient may return to his normal life -- including his usual work. Health authorities report that most TB patients, as soon as medication begins, feel better than they have for years. patients, as soon as medication begins, feel better than they have for years.

After release from the hospital, the tuberculosis patient must continue on medication for as long as two years in order to make sure that the disease organisms won't have a chance to take hold again. Because of this long-term therapy, the patient must see a physician regularly. The State Health Department keeps track of patients undergoing therapy, and its case registry at the end of 1973 contained 10,066 names. The State Health Department doesn't under estimate the threat of TB, once the state's leading killer. It recognizes it as a serious public health problem. But, it's a problem that can be cured and is being cured.

Oil Production Drops In Texas

DALLAS

Despite 12 months of production at 100-percent of the maximum effective recovery rate in most Texas fields, a drop of nearly 6.3 million barrels of crude oil from the state's all-time record high production year of 1972 occurred last year.

Milam County, which has recorded production since 1921, last year produced 142,047 barrels of oil at the rate of 417 barrels a day. Production in 1973 boosted Milam County's production total through the end of the year to $6.6 million.

In 1973, some 33 counties produced more than 10-million barrels of crude oil, with Borden County being added to the list. The top half-dozen, all with production in excess of 50-million barrels, remain the same as the year previous.

Texas production in 1973 amounted to almost 1.3 - billion barrels, tops among the nation's oil producing states and representing 38.6 percent of total U. S. production, according to statistics compiled by Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association.

In 84 years of recorded production, Texas oil fields have produced some 38-billion barrels of oil -- approximately 36 - percent of the U. S. total.

"The decline in production indicates the basic task of the state's oilmen -- the more extensive development of Texas fields," said the Association's president, Sherman Hunt, a Dallas independent producer. "But if Congress will adopt economic policies to encourage the search for new fields, we feel this trend can be changed."

Despite the drop in production, the oil that was produced last year in 203 of the state's 254 counties was valued at some $5 - billion, an increase of approximately $500 - million over the value of oil produced in 1972. This increase partially reflects the increased prices paid for some Texas crude oil during the latter part of 1973.

In addition to larger payments to royalty owners, the higher prices also have been reflected in the state comptroller's reports of increased severance taxes paid by the oilmen of Texas.

For The Love Of Jeans

COLLEGE STATION

Ever since Levi Strauss stitched up his first pair in the mid 1800's, jeans have been part of our way of life.

"Long associated with work--and considered a utility garment--today's jeans are a symbol of fun and a relaxed lifestyle," Marilyn Brown, fashion authority, notes.

"Worn, faded or patched denim indicates a lot of good living gone under the bridge," the consumer education - clothing and textiles specialist said.

Variations of jean fashion are the "status" denims, which gain status with every rip and tear--or "glad rags" ornate with studding, sequins or stitchery.

Jeans also announce the wearer's humor and personality, the specialist continued.

"Some feature rivets, various sorts of glitter, embroidery and decorative stitches -- and famous places, people or things appear on jean seats, pockets and legs.

"Others reflect the European western idea of adding bright, contrasting piping to pockets, seams and waistbands.

"Whatever the method, the 'message' is more important that the model."

Another big fashion switch involves turning workman's jeans into everyman's jeans--with a fashion touch or two, Miss Brown said.

"It began with carpenter jeans--featuring extra pockets and back belt -- and painter jeans, with their own on-the-job extras.

"The newest adaptions include electrician, utility company worker, forester and seaman jeans. They all fit the current mood that makes orange stitching, railroad stripes and polished cotton fashionable," she concluded.

Gun Clubbers Among Program At Somerville

SOMERVILLE

Approximately 80 young Texans between 15 to 18 years old are up to their elbows in hard work and enjoying every minute of it, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

Member of Ben Milam Gun Club are teaching hunter safety in the Somerville program.

The youngsters are part of a national pilot program involving high school students in the Youth Conservation Corp, a summer work and environmental enrichment program which combines environmental education with useful outdoor projects on public lands involving manual labor.

Texas has eight such camps during the summer of 1974 two of which are at the Lake Somerville State Park and administered by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. One is administered by the Texas Department of Forestry and the remainder are run by the federal government.

Half of the money for the Lake Somerville projects comes from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. The Texas program is coordinated through the Governor's Office of Youth Opportunities, Texas Department of Community Affairs.

One camp of 40 boys and another camp of 40 girls at Lake Somerville work at environmentally related projects such as construction of trails, beach stabilization and erosion control, assembly of picnic tables and other state park related projects.

The youths are required to participate in two hours of environmental enrichment training each day in addition to six hours of physical labor duties. They receive a salary which is adjusted for food allowances and quarters. Food is prepared and managed by a private concessionaire.

The Lake Somerville Camps are considered the largest co-educational YCC projects within Texas. The camps have one work leader/counselor for each ten youth. All the counselors have college degrees or have college training with complimentary backgrounds ranging from majors in forestry, biology, and wildlife management to degrees in sociology and physchology.

Department officials describe the camp as "reasonably comfortable," but they say living in camp is not like living in a modern home.

There is a certain degree of "roughing it" within the barrack - type buildings. Food, described as "tasty and solid" and "outdoorish and hearty" is quite unlike what the youth are accustomed to at home which is part of the program.

Hunting And Fishing Day Proclaimed By Governor

AUSTIN

By Governor Dolph Briscoe's official memorandu m Sept. 28, 1974 has been designated "Texas Hunting and Fishing Day."

The date, which corresponds with National Hunting and Fishing Day, was set aside to recognize the "outstanding contributions that America's hunters and fishermen made to conservation, recreation and the economy."

The memorandum says: "Because of the outstanding contributions that America's hunters and fishermen have made to conservation, recreation and the economy, they are deserving of special recognition.

"Since the turn of the century, hunters and anglers have been the leaders in nearly all major conservation programs. These sportsmen - conservationists are responsible for the founding of state fish and game departments in all 50 states. They asked that they, themselves, be required to buy licenses and that the money collected be used to support state conservation agencies.

"Hunters and fishermen asked for the establishment of regulated seasons and bag limits so that sports men could harvest the annual crop of game and fish without damage to the basic breeding population. Further, sportsmen's programs have benefited numerous species of nong-game fish and wildlife through habitat development.

"Hunters and fishermen, unique in all America, asked that their fishing and hunting equipment be taxed and that the money be used for land acquisition, research and habitat management for fish and wildlife for the enjoyment of all Americans.

"Through their publications and organizations, hunters and fishermen have led the nation in the battle for a better environment and the wise use of our natural resources."

You Can Play Tennis Without Wrinkles

Mad dogs and Englishmen aren't the only ones who go out in the noonday sun. Look at any tennis court on a sizzling summer day. You'll find a number of tennis buffs racing back and forth at top speed, seemingly oblivious to the heat.

If they're smart, they'll have taken some precautions before exposing themselves to the hottest sun of the year. This is equally true for men and women tennis players. All should be protecting their skins from an overdose of sunshine with a carefully chosen sun preparation.

If you tan easily and want a lot of color, choose a sun cream or lotion that blocks out only the burning rays and lets the tanning rays come through. If, however, you have a fair skin that burns easily, by all means wear a sun cream that gives maximum blockage.

Don't apply the cream to the bridge of the nose and cheekbone and stop there. Use it on arms, legs and over every inch of exposed skin. Remember too that more skin is exposed when you're moving than when you're standing still. So spread the sun cream under waistbands, under a midriff tied shirt, and higher under the hem of shorts, or skirt, than you think necessary.

Even if you don't sunburn at all, you'd be smart to settle for a light tan and wear some skin protection in the form of a modern sun block. People who get deep, dark suntans year after year wind up with sea captain complexions at an early age — and sometimes with serious skin disorders.

You can't go wrong by pampering your skin out on the tennis courts. Following the after-game shower, everyone should apply a moisturizer to face and body. Modern moisturizers do a quick disappearing act. They won't be visible or feel sticky.

Another favor you can do yourself is to drink several glasses of liquid before the game. This will help avoid severe dehydration as you perspire. Salt tablets are another method of preventing dehydration. Some athletes like them, and some don't. Ask your doctor's advice on taking salt tablets before a midsummer match.

You won't want to eat heavily before a tennis game — or right afterwards either—but you need a light refreshment that's very nourishing.

It is essential that you be in good physical condition to play tennis, and you don't get that way with a weekly game. Daily exercise is a must. Work on your legs and your wind every day by jogging or running. Above all, don't rush from a sedentary job to your summer vacation and plunge into a tennis marathon. Ease it with short games at first.

Whenever you're playing in the hot sun, it's a good idea to wear a tennis hat. It protects the whole head and may prevent heat exhaustion and headaches to say nothing of protecting your eyes. The hat helps not only your vision and your tennis game, but also your face. Squinting in the bright sunlight for a a couple of hours will give you "whiskers" of suntan around the eyes and outer cheeks. That's not very flattering. Wouldn't you rather keep the wrinkles off your face while taking the wrinkles out of your game?

TFB Citizenship Seminar July 16-17

WACO

A number of county Farm Bureau leaders from over the state are expected to attend the First Annual Adult Citizenship Seminar here July 16, 17, sponsored by the Texas Farm Bureau, according to J. T. (Red) Woodson, TFB president.

The state farm organization has sponsored a citizenship seminar for high school students the past 11 ears and is this year adding a session for adults, Woodson said. He explained that the Adult Citizenship Seminar is being planned because of widespread demand for such an affair patterned after the highly successful young people's seminar.

The adult seminar will be held at the Waco Plaza Hotel while the youth seminar is in session on the Baylor University campus. Speaker for the adult seminar will be W. Cleon Skousen of Salt Lake City, Utah, who is also scheduled to address the youth group. Skousen's presentation on the American political system is the equivalent to a four-hour college course in Political Science according to Woodson.
